

DATING Abuse/Violence

The National Resource Center on Domestic Violence defines teen dating violence as:

A pattern of actual or threatened acts of physical, sexual, verbal and/or emotional abuse, perpetrated by an adolescent against a current or former dating partner. The abusive teen uses this pattern of violent and coercive behavior—either in a heterosexual or homosexual dating relationship—in order to gain power and maintain control over the dating partner.

Prevalence

- 1.5 million teens in the U.S. are affected by teen dating violence
- 1 in 5 teens have been in a violent dating situation
- 1 in 2 teens have compromised personal beliefs to please the person they are dating
- 72% of teens have been checked up on by a boyfriend or girlfriend 10 times per hour by email or social networking sites
- 25% of teens have been called names by the person they are dating through text messages

WARNING SIGNS OF ABUSIVE RELATIONSHIPS

Ask Yourself: Does my boyfriend or girlfriend...

- Tell me what to wear?
- Have to be with me all the time?
- Call me names, insult me, or criticize me?
- Act jealous, possessive, controlling, or bossy?
- Give me orders or make all the decisions?
- Get angry very quickly, or fight a lot?
- Threaten to hurt me or someone in my family if I don't do what they want?
- Threaten to hurt themselves if I don't do what they want?
- Shove, punch, slap, pinch, kick, or hit me? Pull my hair? Strangle me?
- Touch or kiss me when I don't want to?
- Check my email, Facebook or text messages?
- Refuse to accept that the relationship is over or not working?

Electronic Dating Violence

"I call it an electronic leash. I've had girls come into my office with cell phone bills showing 9,000 text messages and calls in a month. This is all hours of the day and night. And it's threatening. 'Hi. How are you? Where are you? Who are you with? Who are you talking to?'"

— Dr. Jill Murray, Psychologist

If You Are Being Abused You Might...

- ◇ Believe it is your fault
- ◇ Feel angry, sad, lonely, depressed or confused
- ◇ Feel helpless to stop the abuse
- ◇ Feel threatened, humiliated, or ashamed
- ◇ Feel anxious, trapped, or lonely
- ◇ Worry about what might happen next
- ◇ Feel like you can't talk to family or friends
- ◇ Be afraid of getting hurt
- ◇ Feel protective of your boyfriend or girlfriend
- ◇ Feel bad about yourself because your abuser says you are stupid, lazy, worthless, helpless, crazy, or things like that

There are normal reactions. You are not alone.

In a survey of kids ages 11 to 18, one in 20 boys admits to having uploaded or shared a humiliating or harassing photo of their romantic partner online. Roughly 10 percent of both boys and girls claim to have received a threatening cell-phone message from a romantic partner. Teens are using their ever-present technology for such maliciousness that a new term had to be coined for it: "electronic dating violence."

"It's the phenomenon of no place to run and no place to hide. Now, you can be stalked electronically. You can't even see your predator coming."

— Kevin Jennings,
Assistant Deputy Secretary,
US Department of Education

IF SOMEONE YOU KNOW IS BEING ABUSED...

- Listen. Show support. Tell your friend you are worried about them.
- Ask how you can help
- Encourage your friend to seek help from parents or campus staff
- Instead of deciding what is best for your friend, help them make their own decisions

Warning Signs

- Your partner texts you too much, constantly wanting to know where you are and what you are doing
- Your partner asks for inappropriate pictures be sent
- Your partner asks to read your texts, or reads them behind your back

Tips to Keep You Safe

- ◇ It is okay to turn off your phone
- ◇ Don't answer calls from unknown or blocked numbers... Your abuser can easily call you from another line if they suspect you are avoiding them
- ◇ Don't respond to hostile, harassing, abusive, or inappropriate text messages
- ◇ Save or document troublesome texts in case you later need them as evidence
- ◇ Change your phone number if necessary
- ◇ Talk to your parent/guardian or another caring adult
